A

COMFORTABLE PLACE
TO REST
Linger Awhile in Phoenix

You Motorists who are contemplating a trip through Arizona, of all the Western States, the most famous for its interest and beauty, or those of you who are planning a trip to other points outside the state, will do well to linger awhile in Phoenix.

A winter playground—those words have become more or less stereotyped, but it is in Phoenix and surrounding territory that this can be most truthfully said.

We have here vast orange and grapefruit groves, a rich agricultural valley which supplies winter vegetables to millions of tables the country over. Pure healthful water. Abundance of sunshine, a treasure-trove of health.

Linger awhile and make some of the side trips to the many historical places in the vicinity. Visit Roosevelt Dam and marvel at its hugeness; see the old Indian ruins at Casa Grande; visit Hot Springs; tramp in the desert; climb the mountains; spend a while outdoors. Some of the county's most famous hotels are located in the Salt River Valley. At Chandler the San Marcos with Bungalows; in the wilds you'll find Castle Hot Springs; and near Phoenix there's the Arizona Biltmore. The management of these stopping places are always glad to show the visitor through.

Phoenix and surrounding points have become a winter vacation land for thousands. Besides those who spend the entire winter here, thousands of motorists make it a point to stay at least a while in the Capital City.

Climate

The days are brilliant and warm. Farm work goes on every day, and those seeking recreation find no interruption in daily golf, motor trips, picnics on the desert, and all outdoor pleasures. With such remarkable climate it is natural that each season finds more and more people coming here to spend vacations and enjoy the side trips.

Sports

One can spend many happy hours horseback riding, hiking and golfing. Several fine courses are located in and near Phoenix. Guest cards may be secured to most any of them. Across the boulevard, only a short distance from Autopia lies the El Molino course. Fishing and hunting afford the visitor ample opportunity. The lakes and streams are well stocked with fish and the White Mountain country is often referred to as the "Fisherman's Paradise." In season white wing, quail and doves may be found in abundance. Arizona is also thickly populated with deer in the "back country."

Where to Stop

To get the most from your visit to Arizona, make Phoenix your central stopping place. There the motorist will find Autopia, the Southwest's most beautiful tourist apartments, an ideal stopping place. This apartment court is situated on Highway 80, just east of Phoenix, and is convenient to the shopping district and to connecting highways.
AKE Phoenix by night: Autopia is waiting to welcome you and to provide you with the ultimate in modern motorist accommodations. No need for troublesome unpacking; everything is here, ready for your comfort, inviting you to rest and relax. Bright, cheery apartments, complete in their equipment with gas, electricity, hot and cold running water, refrigeration, telephones, and dozens of other surprising details—all furnished.

To go and come from Autopia there is no bothering with elevators, bell boys and hotel clerks. You do not disturb other guests and are not disturbed by them.

Autopia is operated by experienced hotel people and every effort is made to make the guest feel as if he were in his own home. Daily laundry service for your own needs and clean linens always furnished by the management upon request.

Autopia is more than a road-side stopping place. It is an innovation in tourist apartments, furnishing hotel accommodations at less than hotel rates. Families find Autopia to be exactly what they want. Autopia is located on Highway 80, at 3901 East Van Buren Street, Phoenix. Persons contemplating a stay here would do well to make reservations in advance. For further information write to
